FIRE RECORD.

A Very Destructive Fire at Litchfield, Connecticut.

WATERBURY, Conn., June 11.—Litchfield, the famous summer resort and ancient and beautiful county seat, at 1 o'clock this morning was the scene of a serious fire, which destroyed the Mansion House, court house, and all the business blocks on South street, including Phelps' fancy grocery and bottling establishment, Shepard's jewelry store, the public reading room, a bakery, and Wessels & Smith's clothing store. The fire burned four hours. The town has no fire department, and relied upon a few pumps for water. The Mansion House was just filling with boarders. Lawyer Preston came near being suffocated, and was resuscitated with difficulty. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss is estimated at $200,000; insurance considerable.

Meeting of Friends.

NEWPORT, June 11.—In the New England yearly meeting of Friends today fraternal epistles were read from yearly meetings in Ireland, Baltimore, North Carolina, Ohio, Indiana, Western Iowa, Canada, Kansas and New York. A proposition was received looking to combined action in all yearly meetings with a view to influencing the government on the subject of international arbitration, and it was referred to a joint committee. An invitation was received for the meeting to be held next year at Portland, which will probably be accepted. A movement was made to strike out the word "beverage" from the fifth query. This will, if carried, prohibit all use of liquor by members of this sect, whether as a beverage or medicine.

A net gain in membership of 42 was reported, making the present membership 4,412. The report of the Friends' School in Providence, showing that it cost $30,000 to run the institution, provoked a long discussion, some thinking the expenses excessive. Principal Augustine Jones explained that the standard of the school was high, necessitating heavy expenses, but believed this course best for the New England meeting. The report was approved after a general acceptance of the principal's views.

Mr. Logan, from the committee on appropriations, reported the usual appropriation bill and it was placed on the calendar.

After considerable debate, the Northern Pacific land forfeiture bill went over till tomorrow.

Mr. Spooner then took the floor, and in offering a resolution of condolence on the death of Hon. Joseph Rankin, late Representative in Congress from the State of Wisconsin, delivered an eloquent and touching tribute to the memory of the deceased.

The Senate at 5 o'clock p. m. adjourned till tomorrow.

Fun for the Yachtsmen.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Lively weather is all that is needed to make next week memorable in the history of yachting in the vicinity of New York. Three big yacht clubs, probably the biggest in the country, will bring out their crack boats and struggle for supremacy. The historic Puritan is already in New York harbor and preparing for the race, likewise the sloop Thetis and the big schooner Gitana. The Atlantic will sail, and so will the Puritan's old rival, the Priscilla. It is doubtful if the Mayflower enters these races. New York yachtsmen are looking for a stiff breeze and a great time next week.

Deed of a Drunkard.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Henry Bender, a bully employed in Dolger & Sons' brewery as foreman of a gang of men, got drunk this morning and badly beat Henry Brown, a new employe. Brown pacified Bender drank and told the other men to hold him until he got a policeman. In Brown's absence Bender drew a knife and attacked the other men, cutting Geo. L. Marken, 30 years old, in the abdomen, groin and thigh so badly that his life is despaired of.

Motion for a New Trial.

ST. LOUIS, June 11.—A motion for a new trial has been filed in the famous Maxwell case, and the papers have been taken under consideration by the judge. No importance is attached by the sheriff to the letter received by one of his deputies, offering $10,000 if Maxwell be allowed to escape, and no steps have been taken to find the writer. The affair is considered a hoax.

The Biddeford Conspiracy Case.

[Special to the Press.]

ALFRED, June 11.—The Biddeford election conspiracy case went to the jury at 6.30 o'clock. B. F. Hamilton made the closing argument for all of the respondents and Attorney General Baker closed for the State. The jury have not as yet agreed, and if they do agree, which is at least doubtful, they will not return their verdict until 8 o'clock tomorrow morning. The court will adjourn finally tomorrow noon.

The Page Divorce Case.

ALERED, June 11.—Among the divorce cases tried before Judge Emery today was that of Mrs. Florence C. Page of Biddeford, against Dr. C. E. Page of Boston. Cause, cruel and abusive treatment. Lawyer John A. Coffee of Boston was counsel for Mrs. Page and Eben F. Pillsbury appeared for Dr. Page. The divorce was decreed and the sum of $3500 allowed in lieu of alimony.

The Farmington Normal School.

FARMINGTON, June 11.—The closing exercises of commencement at the Normal School occurred today and consisted of private meetings of the several classes. This morning and this afternoon the triennial reunion of the Alumni Association occurred at Normal Hall, about seventy being present. The programme consisted of singing by the association, led by Prof. Purington; prayer by Mr. Blanchard; address of welcome by Prof. Purington; responses by O. S. Norton, Avon, class of '70; music by double quartette; remarks by alumi; flute solo by Prof. Purington; business; music by the association.

Prof. Purington's address of welcome was excellent, and Mr. Norton prettily responded. At the business meeting the following officers were elected: President, O. S. Norton, Avon, class, '70; vice presidents, L. H. Corliss, Woolwich, '77, Miss Hortense Merrill, Farmington, '81; secretary, Roliston Woodbury, principal of Castine Normal School, '67; assistant secretary, James S. Norton, Farmington, '83; treasurer, A. W. Pottle, Farmington, '83.

This evening a reception was held in Normal Hall by the class of '86, a large number were in attendance and it was an interesting occasion.

Just before adjournment the following resolutions were introduced and adopted:

Resolved—That the Alumni Association of the Farmington Normal School, assembled at Farmington June 11, 1886, send friendly greeting and hearty good wishes to Dr. C. C. Rounds, and express their continued love and respect as increased and strengthened with the passing years.

Resolved—That the Alumni Association extend its earnest sympathy and full support to the principal, G. C. Purington, in his work in this school.

The Civil Service System.

The Republicans will vote solid in the House against the section to destroy the civil service system. Anyone feeling the principle of the section they are satisfied that if this section, reported by the Appropriations Committee, should be enacted into law the purpose is to turn out every employee in the departments here and the Custom Houses and Post Offices of the large cities, with the certainty that the enlarged list to be selected from will be big enough to insure Democratic successors in all instances.

The Oleomargarine Bill.

Joseph H. Reall, President of the association, has to-day issued another manifesto to the dairy farmers and creamery men of the United States congratulating them on the passage by the House of the bill to tax oleomargarine, but warning them that the bill is in danger in the Senate, and urging them to bring all influence possible to bear on that body. He quotes a telegram to him from the Secretary of the National Butter, Egg and Cheese Association at Chicago to the effect that the butterine men had sent a delegation to Washington with barrels of money to work against the bill. Mr. Reall says that as much bogus butter can be made on a capital of $500 in a cellar as 100 farmers with 2500 cows costing $1,000,000 can produce. He threatens the Senate that if it defeats the bill the 7,500,000 farmers of the United States will carry the question into politics and will see that State Legislatures are chosen next fall which will select United States Senators in sympathy with the farmers.

The Public Printing Office.

The latest applicant for public printer is Col. W. A. Hemphill of Charleston, Constitution, and he is being vigorously pushed for the place by Senator Brown and the Geogia delegation. It is said that the President is satisfied with the administration of Public Printer Rounds, and the printing committees of the House and Senate, while not openly recommending his retention, have by their acts given evidence of their satisfaction with the manner in which the public office is at present conducted. Mr. Farquhar of the House Printing Committee said yesterday that the committee were in favor of Mr. Rounds, and that they were of finding it was the cleanest that had come before the House for years. He knew that Mr. Barksdale, the Chairman, was satisfied, and did not want to change.

No Doubt of Approval.

The President was very busy to-day with the bills which accumulated in the hands of the committee on Enrolled Bills during the honeymoon. These bills have all been referred to the department which has jurisdiction of the subject. Among them is the fishery bill with the Frye retaliatory amendment. It will probably be two or three days before this last bill will be reached. There is said to be no doubt that it will be approved.

The President's Wedding Reception.

White House officials are performing one duty this morning, which will be a great relief to society. Formal invitations are being sent out to distinguished persons to attend the wedding reception of the President and Mrs. Cleveland next Tuesday.

The Case of Senator Payne.

Ohio Republican politicians state very positively that the reports in morning papers that the Senate Election Committee will decide not to investigate the Payne case, is not true. They expect the committee to vote in favor of an investigation by a strict party vote.

The Lawrence Post Office.

The President has appointed Francis Murphy Postmaster at Lawrence, Mass.

An Adverse Report.

It is believed that the report that the Senate Judiciary Committee has decided to report the nomination of Mr. Lowe to be Solicitor General unfavorably, is correct. The conclusions of Mr. Ranney in his report in the telephone investigation probably had something to do with this.

A Wedding Present Declined

The Secretary of State recently received a cable message from Minister Cox at Constantinople, saying the Sultan of Turkey desired to send a wedding present to Mrs. Cleveland and asking it to be received. The President, while appreciating the motives of the Sultan, felt that its acceptance would be in violation of the spirit of the letter of the constitution, and accordingly telegraphed his declination of the proposed compliment.

The Alleged Coolness Between President Cleveland and Governor Hill.

Col. Lamont has considered it necessary to contradict the report that there is a sharp antagonism between the President and Gov. Hill, and to state that the fact that the President and Gov. Hill did not review the troops together on Decoration Day in New York is due to incidental causes, and was not the result of design. This statement, however, should probably not be interpreted to mean that the President and Gov. Hill are in perfect political accord so far as certain future possibilities are concerned. In the New York delegation in Congress there is a pretty plain division between Hill men and Cleveland men, and the Hill men are very outspoken in their declarations that they intend to give their favorite the vote of the New York delegation in the next national nominating convention.

Activity Among the Mormons.

Secretary Bayard has received information of unusual activity among the Mormon missionaries throughout all Switzerland, and that their preaching has not been wanting in fruits is shown by the fact that in 1885 there were in Switzerland 29 priests, 34 teachers, 11 servants, 521 members, and 95 converts were baptised, and 52 emigrants sent to Utah. Mormonism, it will thus be seen, has taken deep root among the Swiss people. Scarcely any Roman Catholics are numbered among the converts, nearly all of whom are of the Protestant class. Headquarters of the Swiss Mormons are to be found at Berne from which the enrollment of Mormons is carried on throughout the land. Even children of tender years are enrolled. General assemblies are held at Berne, Jura, Bieberist and Wichtenthurst, the exercises consisting of praying, preaching and singing. The general assembly held at Berne on the 19th and 20th of December last was conducted by 12 elders, and was characterized by great fervor and enthusiasm, and was so largely attended that the hall which had been chartered for the occasion was crowded to overflowing. There have also been organized womens' aid associations as adjuncts to the Swiss Mormonism. One in Berne numbers 19, that in Scheerli four, and that in Shaff-Hausenn two, Mormon Sunday schools are also conducted at various points. It is stated by the press that in cases of departures of newly converted saints for Utah all postible means are resorted to.

Secretary Bayard on the Fishery Question.

In an interview with a newspaper correspondent, last evening, Secretary Bayard said, in regard to the fisheries question, "I am not prepared to say that there is anything new in regard to a settlement of the differences between the British government and our own, on the fisheries question. I have given and am giving the subject my most earnest attention, and shall continue to spare no efforts to accomplish the end we seek. I believe we have a good case. I am so clear on this point that I cannot for a moment think of receding in any degree from the position the United States government has taken in the matter. I believe we shall succeed in establishing the justice of our cause so fully and completely that the British government will recognize and accede to all we claim. The negotiations are necessarily slow, through my remissness on our part, and we must be patient.

"I do not believe the Dominion or the people of Canada are hostile or unfriendly to us, and I was pained to see in papers a statement that some of our fishing vessels have gone out armed. I hope this is not true. If it is, I fear that serious trouble may follow. I feel deeply for these fishermen. I am extremely anxious that their rights shall be protected. I am trying to find out exactly what their rights are under existing laws and treaties. If new laws and new treaties are necessary we will try to secure them. I must be forgotten, however, that it takes two parties to make a treaty. But, as I have said, I want to determine just what rights the fishermen now have. It will not do for them to run the risk of doubtful opinions. I am confident that this trouble would have been precipitated last July if I had not taken steps to avert it. Prompt action was then taken by the State Department and the government pursued their vocations through the season unmolested. They had been much neglected by this government, and I determined that they should receive that attention which they as American citizens had a right to expect when their rights and interests were in jeopardy. It seems to me that there has been a disposition to magnify the real facts in the effort to make good the charge against the Dominion authorities. I think the attorneys of some of the parties have acted unwisely in seeking to crowd matters,"

The President Out of Sorts.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The Graphic publishes the following special from Washington today:

"It is said that the President is displeased with the work of this Congress and will be glad when it gets away. He believes that it has failed to accomplish what it should have done and has done many things which it should have left undone. In his message the President invoked Congress to reform the tariff. That it cannot do because there is a majority against it in both houses. He asked that the coinage of silver be stopped. A large majority in the House nipped that proposition in the bud. He urged the reconstruction of the navy and the building of adequate coast defences. Neither of these measures can be taken up. It is said that a majority are against expenditures of money contemplated in bills now pending. Altogether the wishes of the President have been disregarded, and it causes no surprise that he should implore an early adjournment. All but about forty Democrats are so unalterably opposed to any expenditure of money till the tariff is reformed that it is a forgone conclusion the principle of the section they are satisfied that if this section, reported by the Appropriations Committee, should be enacted into law the purpose is to turn out every employee in the departments here and the Custom Houses and Post Offices of the large cities, with the certainty that the enlarged list to be selected from will be big enough to insure Democratic successors in all instances.

An Adverse Report.

It is believed that the report that the Senate Judiciary Committee has decided to report the nomination of Mr. Lowe to be Solicitor General unfavorably, is correct. The conclusions of Mr. Ranney in his report in the telephone investigation probably had something to do with this.

A Wedding Present Declined

The Secretary of State recently received a cable message from Minister Cox at Constantinople, saying the Sultan of Turkey desired to send a wedding present to Mrs. Cleveland and asking it to be received. The President, while appreciating the motives of the Sultan, felt that its acceptance would be in violation of the spirit of the letter of the constitution, and accordingly telegraphed his declination of the proposed compliment.

The Alleged Coolness Between President Cleveland and Governor Hill.

Col. Lamont has considered it necessary to contradict the report that there is a sharp antagonism between the President and Gov. Hill, and to state that the fact that the President and Gov. Hill did not review the troops together on Decoration Day in New York is due to incidental causes, and was not the result of design. This statement, however, should probably not be interpreted to mean that the President and Gov. Hill are in perfect political accord so far as certain future possibilities are concerned. In the New York delegation in Congress there is a pretty plain division between Hill men and Cleveland men, and the Hill men are very outspoken in their declarations that they intend to give their favorite the vote of the New York delegation in the next national nominating convention.

Arrival of New Mackerel.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., June 11—The schooner Alice C. Jordan arrived from the Nova Scotia coast today with 220 barrels of mackerel, being the first to arrive from that fishing ground. Capt. Warren says all the mackerel were caught outside of the three-mile limit, and he did not resort to the Nova Scotia coast for them. They are the first new mackerel of any consequence landed here this season.

Schooner Nellie M. Davis, Capt. Melanson, has arrived from the Nova Scotia coast, where he has been cruising, and is the first arrival. He visited no harbors there; saw no mackerel, although large schools were reported gone east. He kept six miles from land, but thinks that Canadian cutters will not interfere with vessels outside three miles from any land. Reports seeing the Lansdowne and other cruisers, but they did not interfere with him. The Davis returns without any mackerel. The prospect is reported as being unfavorable.

DEATH OF FATHER HENDRICKEN,

Bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Providence, R. I.

Sketch of His Busy Life.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 11.—The Right Rev. Thomas Francis Hendricken, Bishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of Providence, died at the Episcopal residence in this city this evening. On Sunday, May 16th, Bishop Hendricken preached eight times in the villages in Pawtucket valley and took a severe cold which increased during the following week. His natural affection, the asthma, took a firm grasp on him and several times in the past month critical moments arrived, but were safely passed. He grew rapidly worse this afternoon and expired at 8.50 o'clock.

Father Strong of the Cathedral was reading the last prayer for the dying from the Roman ritual. His only words were "O Lord thy will be done." Bishop Hendricken was born March 5, 1827, in the city of Kilkenny, Ireland. He was educated for the priesthood in academies of his native town, St. Kyran's College, Kilkenny, and Royal College of Maynooth. He was ordained by Bishop O'Reilly of the diocese of Hartford, then visiting in Ireland, and on his invitation the young priest came to America. Father Hendricken was in 1853 installed curate in the old cathedral in this city. He evinced remarkable executive abilities for with few communicants and small revenues he cleared his church debt in 16 months, and purchased and paid for lots in different villages, on every one of which a church was afterward built. In 1855 he was appointed pastor of the church of Immaculate Conception, Waterbury, Conn., where he remained for seventeen years. During his ministry in this place he built a costly gothic church, school house and pastoral residence, bought and laid out a beautiful cemetery and founded a convent. He received from Pius IX the degree of doctor of divinity. In 1872 the diocese of Hartford was devided and the diocese of Providence created. He was appointed by Pius IX first bishop of Providence and was consecrated to his holy duties April 28th of that year. He visited Rome in 1873 and again in 1878 to pay his respects to the new Pope, Leo XIII. Since his consecration the number of priests and parishes in the diocese has been doubled; churches and chapels have been added, schools opened, Jesuit Fathers instituted in Providence.

ON THE WAR PATH.

Nine Murders by the Reckless Tribe of the Apaches.

TOMBSTONE, Arizona, June 11.—The latest murders by the Apaches are Thomas Hunt, well known in that section, near Harshaw, and an unkown man in San Pedro Valley, six miles from Benson. The band contained eighteen well clad bucks, all mounted on good American horses and leading several others. As an evidence of the reckless, dare-devil manner in which Apaches roam the country it is stated on reliable authority that the trail of five Indians was recently discovered within three hundred yards of Fort Huachuca. A day or two ago five Mexican wood teamsters were chased by a band of Apaches from Whitestone Mountains to Huachuca, seven miles distant. One Mexican was shot through the hand and one through the leg.

The question of using bloodhounds to pursue Apaches is again being discussed by the Territorial press. The trouble experienced by the army is not so much how to kill Apaches as how to catch them. It is claimed that by using light flying columns, each man leading a spare horse and carrying several bloodhounds in pack saddles with each column, a fair chance of success would attend as well as by day, and the Indians would thus inevitably be brought to bay. This plan has received the approval of old Arizona army officers, and it is hoped that Gen. Miles will give it a trial. The only fear is that the secretary of war might characterize such a mode of warfare as "inhuman."

The summer rains, which are now about to commence, it is expected, will have a damaging effect on the Indians if the bloodhound hunt is inaugurated, as it would compel the hostiles to keep continually moving. It is well known that under such circumstances Indians cannot keep the trail long, as in wet weather their moccasons quickly become soft and soggy, affording no protection to their feet and they soon get footsore and unable to travel. At the same time pursuit by troops would be just as active and this would soon lead to the settlement of the troubles.

LABOR TROUBLES.

Workmen Who Wish to Concede a Point.

BOSTON, June 11.—A meeting of master masons in this city was held today, and it is said to have resolved unanimously to return from the nine hour to the ten hour system on and after Monday next.

Blacksmiths Strike.

TAUNTON, Mass., June 11.—Fifty blacksmiths, Knights of Labor, have gone out from the Mason Machine Works, asking for a restoration of the last cut. The managers say they will resist it, but will raise the pay where deserved.

Tanners Strike in Lowell.

LOWELL, Mass., June 11.—Work is entirely suspended at Maddock's tannery this morning, and from controversy with the employes the firm will have to search for other hands when they get ready to work. A member of the firm said the men were not treating the firm fairly in demanding such a list of prices as they submitted. The demand made for the increase of ordinary laborers' wages placed those employed on a par with skilled laborers. Among other classes of workmen the plan presented the firm is looked upon as only a just demand. At the works the superintendent was unable to state when work would be resumed.

New York Tailors Will Go to Work.

NEW YORK, June 11.—The tailors' strike in this city has probably been settled by committees of the Knights of Labor and the bosses. The tailors claim that they will make less than they did before, and have not yet voted to go to work, but it is believed the terms will be accepted at a meeting to be held tomorrow. There are 800 men and women affected by the strike.

NOT A BOARDING SCHOOL.

A Queer Mistake Made by a Clergyman.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 11.—Since August 19, 1885, the parents of Katie Kerr, 16 years old, have been paying $7 per week for the maintenance of their daughter in the "Shelter," an institution for reclaiming abandoned women in Syracuse, under the supposition that the girl was a pupil in a boarding school. The mistake arose through the representations of a Buffalo clergyman who seems to have acted in good faith, but who was evidently misinformed. The Kerrs are respectable people and the girl was slow to discover the character of the place in which she was confined. Some of her letters in which she expressed a dislike for the place and said she did not think the institution much of a school aroused the suspicions of her parents and Mrs. Kerr went to Syracuse yesterday and traced her daughter to the "Shelter." The matron supposing the case to be an ordinary one was proof against the mother's tears and refused to give the girl up nor would she honor an order from chief of police Wright of Syracuse. Finally Bishop Huntington was seen and the mother easily induced him to send a letter to the institution for Miss Kerr's release. The mother and daughter returned to Buffalo last night.

Swept Away by a Flood.

CHEYENNE, Wyoming Ter., June 11.—A family named Armstrong, of Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory, consisting of husband, wife, two sons and one daughter, went up in a little mountain valley in the Territory last fall and settled. They mysteriously disappeared in the last part of May, and not until now has any trace of them been found. A party of cowboys passing below the location of the ranche on Tuesday, found the body of Mrs. Armstrong in a canon. The remains of Mr. Armstrong and his daughter were found some distance below in a tree top. The boys have not been discovered. It is surmised that a sudden flood, caused by the melting of the snow, swept away the house and the inmates, and the position of the bodies serves to confirm this belief.

The Argus's affection for the soldier is very, very touching.

The Puritan, Priscilla and Mayflower are together for a race at New York. If some fast craft called the Witch could heave in sight it might make things interesting.

The English sparrow has at last become so great a pest as to attract the attention of Congress. How would it do to put on an internal revenue tax?

The Democratic papers still refuse to get their candidate's name right. A day or two ago the Argus called him Mr. Edmunds, and now the Rockland Opinion calls him Col. Edward.

It is reported that President Albert E. Pilsbury, of the Massachusetts State Senate has sued the Boston Globe for calling him "E. F." Pillsbury in a report of the dinner of the Massachusetts Medical Society.

The Express under the management of William H. Smith, Esq., is striking some pulverizing blows. Mr. Smith is no trimmer. He means what he says, and says what he means in vigorous Anglo-Saxon.

The judiciary committee is quite right in reporting adversely the nomination of Solicitor General Goode. To have been successful at election frauds in Virginia is not a good recommendation for a high legal officer of the United States.

Admiral Jouett has been removed from the command of the North Atlantic Squadron because, it is said, he is of too impetuous a nature. The administration wanted somebody cool and deliberate, like Secretary Bayard for instance.

Dr. Spitzka of New York has discovered that he can produce hydrophobia in the dog by inoculating with yellow soap, matter from the spinal column of a perfectly healthy calf and various other things. Now if he will discover as easy a way to prevent it as to produce it he will have done something useful.

Mr. Winston, late minister to Persia, resigned because the climate did not agree with him, and because he could not stand the heavy dinners which he says are the "only amusement" at Teheran. He expresses the opinion that there is no need whatsoever of the United States government maintaining a mission in Persia. He is undoubtedly right as far as the interests of the government are concerned, but he should remember that there are a good many Democrats to be provided for.

We have in our own State an illustration of the need of suitable extradition arrangements with Canada. A man named William Buckley, who embezzled money in Lynn, Massachusetts, sought refuge in New Brunswick. By some means he was enticed over the line to Calais, and arrested by detectives from Lynn. Thursday evening three masked men entered Calais, overpowered the officer in charge of Buckley and hurried the prisoner back into the Provinces. No one knows who the kidnappers were, but there are several American citizens in that region who might have felt like lending a hand to a companion in distress. The ex-town treasurer of Anson, if he believes in the golden rule, should have had a hand in the affair.

The President is disappointed with Congress and is anxious for it to pack up and go home. Had he been as thoroughly acquainted with his party as he ought to have been, he would not have been disappointed, for he would have expected no useful legislation from a House in which it is in the ascendancy. It is a fact, however, that the present House has surpassed its immediate predecessors in its sins both of omission and commission. Hardly a single useful measure has passed it, but on the other hand the appropriations have been swelled to $40,000,000 more than last year, without any exigencies which demanded any increase whatever The pledges of the Democratic platform have been ignored, the interests of the country have been neglected, and the suggestions of the President have received either no attention whatever or unfavorable attention. The country certainly shares the hope of the President that the present session will be speedily brought to an end.

Mr. Randall's attempt to nullify the civil service law will fail, but it will serve to call the attention of the country to the fact that the law is by no means so thoroughly established that it is safe to relax vigilance concerning it. Mr. Randall is too shrewd a Democrat to place himself in opposition to it unless he knew that there was a strong sentiment in his party against it. His attitude, therefore, is conclusive proof that a considerable portion of the Democratic party, if not the majority, would like to see the law swept from the statute book or so modified as not to interfere with the work of turning Republicans out and putting Democrats in. To be sure, Randall's rider was not in letter an assault upon the law, but it was so in spirit. It proposed to change the rules so that all the names on the eligible list should be sent to the appointing power, instead of the four highest. That would virtually destroy the competitive feature of the law, and without that the law would become of no account whatever as a means of restraining the appointing power from selecting men for the offices largely on account of their political proclivities. Under Mr. Randall's plan we should have an abundance of what the Democratic conventions call honest civil service reform—that is, every vacancy would be filled by a Democrat.

THE ULSTER ORANGEMEN.

Mr. Parnell seems to have known what he was talking about when he said that an Orangeman was as safe in the south of Ireland as he himself would be in the northern counties. Riots are always to be expected in any part of the United Kingdom during times of political excitement, but the tumults going on in Belfast are remarkable, even in Ulster. They are happening, too, at the very beginning of the political excitement. The Orangemen have attacked their Nationalist neighbors because inflamed at the results of a discussion in a distant city. When every constituency in Ulster is contested in the next election, when the passions of the people are inflamed by direct addresses such as have yet been heard only in the halls of Parliament, the tact of the leaders will be put to severe tests in keeping their followers from deplorable excesses. Lord Randolph Churchill has already preached resistance to Ulster, and his words have undoubtedly had their influence in firing the Orange temper. Should the Tory orators follow in the same strain in the coming campaign, they will be responsible for the bloodiest political campaign seen in Ireland for years. The south of Ireland, meanwhile, is waiting in peace; but it is hardly reasonable to suppose that even Parnell can restrain his followers from taking vengeance on their Orange neighbors, if the tumults in Ulster are repeated in the heat of the campaign.

A CHILD'S SUFFERING

From Eczema. Ears and Scalp Covered with Scabs and Sores. Cured by Cuticura.

My little son, aged eight years, has been afflicted with Eczema of the scalp, and at times a great portion of the body, ever since he was two years old. It began in his ears, and extended to his scalp, which became covered with scabs and sores, and from which a sticky fluid poured out, causing intense itching and distress, and leaving his hair matted and lifeless. Underneath these scabs the skin was raw, like a piece of beefsteak. Gradually the hair came out and was destroyed, until but a small patch was left at the back of the head. My friends in Peabody know how my little boy has suffered. At night he would scratch his head until his pillow was covered with blood. I used to tie his hands behind him, and in many ways tried to prevent his scratching; but it was no use, he would scratch. I took him to the hospital and to the best physicians in Peabody without success. About this time, some friends, who had been cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, prevailed upon me to try them. I began to use them on the 15th of January last. In seven months every particle of the disease was removed. Not a spot or scab remains on his scalp, to tell the story of his suffering. His hair has returned, and is thick and strong, and his scalp as sweet and clean as any child's in the world. I cannot say enough to express my gratitude for this wonderful cure by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, and wish all similarly afflicted to know that my statement is true and without exaggeration.

CHARLES McKAY,
Oct. 6, 1885. Peabody, Mass.

I have seen Mr. McKay's boy when badly affected with the Eczema. He was a pitiful sight to look at. I know that he has tried our best physicians, and did all a father could do for a suffering child, but availed nothing. I know that the statements he has made you as regards the curing of his boy by your CUTICURA REMEDIES are true in every particular.

CURRENT COMMENT.

THE REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.
Bridgton News.

The candidate and platform are in hearty accord with the best thought of Maine Republicanism, and the indications point unmistakably to a lively campaign, and the election of the ticket by one of our old-fashioned Republican majorities.

NO HYPOCRISY ABOUT THIS.
New York Sun.

No mercy for civil service reform humbug, no consideration for the sensitive feelings of the Mugwumps, should be the programme of the Democrats in the House in their action on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill. It is about the time for the Democratic party to take its turn at the wheel.

Springfield Union.

The Maine Republicans have made a good beginning of the State campaign of 1886 in the nomination of J. R. Bodwell of Hallowell for governor. * * * * * *

The action of the Democratic House of Representatives at Washington at the present session of Congress has been especially objectionable to the people of Maine, and the Democratic candidate for governor will have to encounter this in his candidacy. The new Democratic officeholders in Maine are of course grateful to Chairman Brown and President Cleveland for their offices and salaries, but the voters of Maine will repudiate the Democratic party and elect Mr. Bodwell governor by an old-fashioned majority.

A DEMOCRATIC TRIBUTE TO CONGRESSMAN REED.
Philadelphia Times. (Dem.)

Congressman Reed, of Maine, was unanimously renominated by the Republicans of York and Cumberland counties on Friday, and, as his district has about one thousand Republican majority, he will doubtless be re-elected without serious trouble. By general consent Mr. Reed is recognized as the leader on the Republican side of the House. There may be more profound men there, but there is none more generally available. In private he is one of the most genial of fellows; in public no one is more feared for his powers of sarcasm and ridicule, with possibly the single exception of Ingalls in the Senate. But there is this distinction between Reed and Ingalls—the latter is frequently, nay usually, bitter, and very often angry, while Reed is the essence of good humor, in almost everything he says or does. As a consequence, no man in the House has more friends on the Democratic side, and few have more in the House throughout. There is usually a smile on the faces of those who form a group of which Reed is the centre, for a merry jest is usually on his lip, and no group, by the way, ever forms of which he does not become a central, if not the central figure. Unlike the average Congressman, he is not overawed by his own importance, but meets the plainest and most unassuming of men with as hearty a greeting as he does a millionaire Senator.

ABOUT OUR CANDIDATE.

ABLE AND PROGRESSIVE.
Dover Republican.

The Republicans of Maine at the convention in Lewiston Wednesday, nominated Hon. Joseph R. Bodwell of Hallowell for governor. He is a conspicuous representative of all the industrial interests of the State, and a liberal, able, progressive man.

A MAN OF THE PEOPLE.
Boston Traveller.

The nomination is a most excellent one, and the voters of Maine will have an opportunity of bestowing their suffrages on a man of the people, who has been truthfully described as one "whose character is without blemish, whose integrity is unquestioned, whose business capacity is unsurpassed, and whose patriotism is pure and practical."

CAPABLE AND WORTHY.
N. Y. Tribune.

The nomination of J. R. Bodwell for Governor by the Maine Republicans had been distinctly foreshadowed in the preliminary canvass and was made in the Lewiston convention yesterday by an overwhelming majority on the first ballot. The candidate is in every respect capable and worthy, and his selection will undoubtedly give full satisfaction to the bulk of the Republicans throughout the State.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The Wind of Destiny. By Prof. A. S. Hardy, author of But Yet a Woman. (Boston: Houghton, Mifflin & Co.; Portland: Loring, Short & Harmon.) The readers of Prof. Hardy's first novel will find this one very much like it in richness of originality and in its epigrammatic force. A long list of bright sayings could be culled from this, as from the earlier one. The unsatisfactory thing about the book is its swiftly changing scenes, and its almost jerky style of construction. There are many strong characters and some lovable ones, but one does not have time to get acquainted with them before they are whisked off into space or finally disposed of by disaster. One cannot help feeling that it is a strong book and that there is much genuine learning in it. Nor is it without a connected and consistent plot and motive. And yet it leaves an unpleasant feeling on the reader's mind when he is done with it, and he longs for the writer to appear who can unite something of Howells's potent development of character with this author's production of them ready made, and who does not even seem to mourn their sudden taking off. It is, however, a book to be carefully read, and is far above the average novel of the day.

The Boat Sailer's Manuel. By Edward F. Qualtrough, Lieutenant United States Navy. Author of The Sailor's Handy Book and Yachtman's Manuel. (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons.) This attractive little volume treats chiefly of the handling and rigging of small craft, and will doubtless be read with interest and profit by that large class of persons who, not aspiring to the designation of yachtsmen, take pleasure in the management of sailing boats. It gives instruction for the management of sailing boats of all kinds, and under all conditions of weather. It contains, also, descriptions of the various rigs in general use at home and abroad, directions for handling sailing cunoes, and the rudiments of cutter and sloop sailing. One section is devoted to weather indications, instructions for saving drowning persons, and the treatment of those apparently drowned, with practical suggestions respecting accidents, injuries and poisons. There is also a vocabulary of nautical terms. The whole volume is indexed, and was illustrated. It is printed in clear type, and though of some six hundred pages, is of a form convenient for the pocket or locker.

"ONE OF MY CLERKS."

I.

There was much speculation and suppressed excitement in the office of Messrs. Cragsby & Golding, colonial brokers, of Fenchurch street. Mr. Cragsby, for many years the senior partner in the firm, had just died, and the conduct and management of affairs had thus devolved upon Mr. Golding, who was now sole partner, and also nephew and executor to the deceased. The event had caused in the office a feeling of unanimous regret.

While by nature a just man, Mr. Cragsby had been an unusually kind one—so far, at all events, as those whom he employed were concerned. A man of high principle and strict probity, he never made his own uprightness and rectitude an excuse for severely judging others. As one of his clerks put it, "Cragsby was strict, but you couldn't help liking him, for he would never find fault without a cause for it." This necessarily insured him the respect and liking of those who were under his authority.

Another circumstance which added to his popularity was the fact that he disliked making changes in the arrangements of the firm. Having once employed a man and found him trustworthy, Mr. Cragsby preferred to retain him, even though the salary paid continuously increased. This gave a feeling of security to clerks and warehousemen, which remained undisturbed till the death of the chief rudely awakened them, when they remembered how different were the views and opinions of the junior partner, who would now hold undisputed sway. For Mr. Golding was accustomed to rate his social inferiors by a very different scale. Each, in his eyes, had "a market value." That was his phrase. A man might have served the firm well and faithfully for twenty or thirty years, but this, in Mr. Golding's estimation, gave him no claim to regard or consideration.

But, as almost always happens, there was one person with whom his rudeness of manner was veiled by courtesy, his asperity softened into mildness, by the desire to please, and this person was the daughter of the late partner, and consequently his cousin, Elinor Cragsby.

To some years Mr. Golding had cherished in his inmost heart—or perhaps it would be better to say mind than heart—a liking for his fair relative, and he had set himself to gain her favorable regard. As yet, however, he had not achieved any marked success, but he was of a dogged, persevering nature, and did not despair. The match would be a very advantageous one, for Elinor was, by her father's death, placed in possession of a considerable fortune, which would be of use in extending and improving the business.

II.

"Renshaw, the governor wants you," said one of the seniors to a young man who, bending over his desk, appeared so intent upon his occupation that the other had to repeat the words, and in a louder key, before any notice was taken.

Then Gilbert Renshaw, with a brief "Thank you, Brown," put his work carefully in his desk, and locking it, turned and walked quietly across the office to the private room. Mr. Brown looked at him.

"He's a queer one," he soliloquized. "He's been here for four or five years, and he takes things as cooly as if he had been here all his life—more coolly, in fact. Half of us would have gone to Golding full pelt, but not he; catch him hurrying. I can't make him out," and with this candid admission, Mr. Brown turned his attention to his letter writing.

Meanwhile Gilbert Renshaw had entered the private room where Mr. Golding sat alone.

"You have kept me waiting, Mr. Renshaw."

"I regret to hear it, sir," was the quiet reply.

The chief shifted in his chair, and looked up at the young man. Of all his clerks, apart from the important question of their "market value," Gilbert Renshaw was the one whom he most disliked.

"I have sent for you, Mr. Renshaw," resumed the chief, "to point out an error of yours in these papers—an error which might have involved grave consequences."

Gilbert Renshaw bowed, but said nothing. The error thus magnified into so much importance, was in reality a trifling oversight, and was for the most part the fault of a junior. This, probably, Mr. Golding well knew: but as the papers would come before Renshaw for revision, he chose to assume that the entire blame rested with him. The young man was at once too high-minded and kind-hearted to exculpate himself by accusing his junior, and in a few words expressed his regret.

"It must not occur again, Mr. Renshaw."

Gilbert bowed, but made no reply, and then, after taking his principal's directions, left the room.

Mr. Golding looked after him with an annoyed expression on his face.

"If I catch you tripping again," he muttered to himself, "you shall suffer for it, my friend."

But the days went by, and for a time his vindictiveness remained without an opportunity to exercise itself.

He was shrewd enough, however, to wait his opportunity. And that was not long in coming. One Saturday afternoon he happened to want Gilbert for some purpose, and sent for him. The young man could nowhere be found. Mr. Golding glanced at the clock and frowned angrily.

It was just ten minutes to the time at which, their work being done, the clerks were entitled to leave. Some were already closing their desks, and making preparations for departure, but the sudden appearance of the chief in the outer office gavanized them into renewed activity. A kind-hearted senior in the meantime surreptitiously dispatched an office boy to the restaurant which Gilbert generally frequented, but the well-meant effort was fruitless.

Mr. Golding walked across the office to the further window, which, the house being a corner one, commanded the length of the street, and stood looking out. Suddenly he uttered a slight exclamation, which drew all eyes, with glances more or less furtive, to the window. There, at some little distance, quietly strolling along, was Gilbert Renshaw. Unconscious of those watching him he paused at the corner, looked at his watch, and, after a moment's hesitation as if uncertain what course to pursue, turned into a side street and disappeared.

III.

Monday morning came, and to the amazement of each and all Mr. Golding was first at the office. The juniors, who were naturally among the earliest, were warned by the housekeeper in a mysterious whisper that "the governor was there." A greater degree of order and silence reigned that morning than was usual.

One by one, as the clerks came in, the various posts were taken up. By the senior clerk's desk stood Mr. Golding, a hard, pitiless expression on his face. The clock was just chiming nine when the door swung open, and Gilbert Renshaw walked in. He glanced round, evidently rather surprised at seeing Mr. Golding, and then walked toward his desk. Ere he had taken three steps the principal's voice checked him:

"You left before the time on Saturday, Mr. Renshaw?"

"About ten minutes before two," answered the other.

"And your reason for doing so?"

"My work was finished and I had an important engagement."

"Indeed!" sneered his employer. "But I do not allow any one of my clerks to keep important engagements till the office is closed, and as you have thought fit to leave at your own time, you will not be surprised if I inform you that I shall not need your services longer. This is the amount due to you," and Mr. Golding held out a slip of paper, but Gilbert made no movement to take it.

"I understand you, Mr. Golding, and I am as ready to leave your service as you are to require me to do so. Technically you are in the right, and I therefore apologize for having deprived you of ten minutes on Saturday. My presence, doubtless, is not very agreeable to you, but we may meet again before long; should such an event happen, you will please understand that the interview will not be of my seeking. Good-day, gentlemen," and with a comprehensive glance and bow to the amazed onlookers, the young man turned and quitted the office, leaving his employer standing, as much astonished as anyone, with the unheeded check still between his fingers.

IV.

Elinor Cragsby sat with her friend and companion dreamily gazing into the fire. After a while the elder lady looked up from the book she was reading.

"A penny for your thoughts, Nell!"

The girl started at the voice, and the words had to be repeated before she seemed to understand them.

"I'm not sure," she said meditatively, "that they are worth the sum."

"Then," said her friend, with a smile, "without wishing to be uncomplimentary to the subject of them, I think I can guess their direction."

"I wish I could make him see how useless it is," the girl broke out, apparently irrelevantly.

"He doesn't wish to see that," said her companion. "As I have often told you, it appears to me that he has deliberately resolved to succeed in the attempt to win your regard, as he is not a man of fine feelings. Nothing short of absolute discourtesy or rudeness would repel him, unless, indeed, it were the presence of a successful rival," she added in a lower and a meaning tone.

There was something in the last sentence that brought a flush to Elinor Cragsby's face. She rose from her seat, and moving toward the window stood looking out. Suddenly she uttered an exclamation of annoyance. Her friend looked in.

"Here he is!" said Elinor, as if in answer to the look.

A smile played for a moment around Mrs. Scaforth's lips.

"Shall I leave you?" she said, half rising.

"No—on no account;" and Elinor, smiling herself, in spite of her vexation, crossed the room, and with gentle force pushed the elder lady into her seat again, and then resumed her own. Scarcely had she done so when the servant announced "Mr. Golding," and that gentleman entered, all bows and smiles.

"Elinor," he said, attempting to take her hand, "you must know how long and how devotedly I have been attached to you, and how I have longed for the hour that should enable me to approach you and offer myself as a suitor for your hand."

He paused to note the effect of this declaration, which in reality he had carefully prepared before he reached the house that evening. But he learned nothing from the contemplation of the face before him. It was slightly averted, as was natural, but in no wise did its fair owner seem discomposed. Mr. Golding began to feel a little uneasy, and a new idea for the first time flashed upon his mind. Could there be another?. It seemed too absurd, but it would not be dismissed. He rose from his chair and bent over her for a last appeal.

"Can it be," he murmured, half reproachfully. "Have I a rival?"

As the words left his lips the room door opened and a voice announced "Mr. Renshaw." At the sound Mr. Golding, with a sudden start, faced round, and his face utter astonishment beheld before him, smiling courteously and with outstretched hand, the man whom he had dismissed from his service, whom he had even spoken of contemptuously to Elinor herself as "one of my clerks."

"A friend of yours?" he said, interrogatively, but in a tone that sounded strange in his own ears, and caused the other three to look curiously at him.

The girl blushed and smiled, but did not answer; and Mrs. Seaforth, who had risen and approached them, came to her rescue.

"Mr. Renshaw was a friend of Mr. Cragsby's and is still a friend of ours."

"Mr. Renshaw," said the other, "probably has good reasons for his friendship. Fortune-hunters usually have."

Gilbert Renshaw took a step forward, and said, with all his former easy indifference: "That is true as a general statement, Mr. Golding, but it is not true in this particular instance. I, personally, am not a fortune-hunter. Perhaps you know of some one who may better deserve the name?"

"You were my clerk," said Golding with a sneer; "what are you now?"

"I will tell you," replied the other in the same unruffled tone. "As you rightly said, I was your clerk, and it came about in this way: At my father's death the property to which I succeeded was somewhat encumbered. Your late partner was an old friend of ours, and he suggested that I should obtain a situation for a few years, thus leaving the property to clear itself by applying the income to the extinction of the debt. To simplify matters, he kindly offered me a position in his own office at a good salary, stipulating that nothing should be said or known of his long friendship with our family, lest it should be thought it might favor me. I accepted the post. In a few years, as we planned, my property was unencumbered, and your sudden dismissal of me simply anticipated my own resignation by two or three weeks. You see, Mr. Golding, while I give you full credit for having intended to injure me, I can very readily treat with indifference a course of action that has ended in failure."

As Gilbert ceased speaking, he glanced meaningly at Elinor, who, with Miss Seaforth, had stood quietly by. It was evidently no news to them, and Mr. Golding, as his gaze traveled from one face to another, saw that his efforts had been in vain, and that success was hopeless.

But the whole matter was so utterly unexpected that for a moment he felt that it could not be really true. He turned to Elinor.

"You know of all this, it seems."

"Yes," she said, but speaking in so low a tone that he could scarcely catch the words; "I knew of all; but it was my father's wish that the matter should not be mentioned. You would, however, have known it before long, for—for——"

She hesitated, and cast an appealing glance at Gilbert.

"We are to be married shortly," said that gentleman, promptly completing the sentence.

The blushing face, the downcast eyes, beside him confirmed the statement, if, indeed, confirmation was needed. Mr. Golding waited to hear no more, but, turning short on his heel, with a muttered execration, left the room and the house.

WIT AND WISDOM.

An Alexandria woman's huband had been given a position under the janitor of the capitol, and the neighboring women were discussing the matter.

"So Mrs. Bander's husband has got a job at the capitol, I hear," said one.

"Yes, so they tell me."

"What is it?"

"A senator, I think they said."

"No, not a senator," said another in a tone of superior wisdom, "a janitor you're thinkin' about."

"Well, it was a senator or janitor, or somethin' like that, I couldn't jest ketch it when they was tellin' me."

Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites—For Rickets, Marasmus and all wasting disorders of children, a very remarkable in its results.—The rapidity with which children gain flesh and strength upon it is very wonderful.

It is said that a quick-witted American woman upon a visit to England, on being complimented upon her English by a British officer, who asked if she was not peculiar in this respect among her countrywomen, replied:

"Oh, yes; but then I have had unusual advantages; there was an English missionary stationed near my tribe."

CURE FOR CROUP.—Use Dr. Thomas's Eclectric Oil according to directions. It is the best remedy for all sudden attacks of colds, pain and inflammation, and for injuries.

"You said you loved me just now, my child; what do you love with, your forehead?"

"No."

"Your hand, your foot, your cheek, your eyes?"

"No—no—" and the inquiring hand fluttered from one member to another as they were mentioned, pausing at last over the heart, with a triumphant.

"Oh, I know how what I love with—it's—it's the piece that joggles!"

If there ever was a specific for any one complaint, then Carter's Little Liver Pills are a specific for sick headache, and every woman should know this. Only one pill a dose.

Portly old gentleman (to student in lawyer's office)—Is Counselor Blackstone in?

Law student—He is at present engaged in consultation, sir; he will be at liberty in a moment, if you will wait.

Portly old gentleman (taking a chair)—Do you smoke? (Pulling a cigar from his vest pocket.)

Law student (rising eagerly)—Yes, sir.

Portly old gentleman—Then you won't object to my lighting a cigar.

Pimples and humors once disfigured my face. The use of Vegetine has removed them.

Georgie is four years old. One day the youngster had been taken with a slight attack of prevarication, and wishing to impress upon his infantile understanding the sinfulness of telling fibs, the father related the story about George Washington and his little hatchet, closing with the remark that George Washington was a good boy and never told a lie. The child sat in deep thought a moment and then said: "Papa, toodent he talk?"

My friend, look here! you know how weak and nervous your wife is, and you know that Carter's Iron Pills will relieve her, now why not be fair about it and buy her a box?

Waiter—Say, I think that man in No. 76 has blown the gas out and gone to bed.

Hotel Proprietor—Has, hey? well, I'll charge him for the waste of gas in the morning.

Waiter—Yaiter—Yes, but he may die from breathing it.

Hotel proprietor—Not much. He belongs to the Board of Health. They never smell nothing!

A New Woman Craze in the East.

A little fodder plant has been discovered that removes nervous exhaustion and nervousness at once. It makes a big appetite, sweet sleep, and gives double powers of endurance, while it is harmless, tasteless, and is neither a medicine nor stimulant. There is great excitement over it everywhere. It is said to prolong the liquid state and remove the effects of dissipat on and over-indulgency at once. Druggists sell it. It is very cheap. They call it Moxie Nerve Food. If they, we are not surprised the women are excited over it. It will make the use of medicine unnecessary half the time. The doctors commend it. Its sale is salt to be unparalled. First, the women went wild over it for nervous exhaustion and effects of severe physical and mental overstrain. It was ascertained that it will stop the liquor habit and remove the effects of dissipation and physical abuses at once. A huge company has been formed, and Chicago is to have a manufactory at 33 North State Street. There is a perfect craze over it in Washington and large cities East. Everybody drings it from the President down. They call it Moxie Nerve Food. The doctors say it is harmless, being neither medicine stimulant or poison. It is exceedingly popular among the elite of big cities. It is rapidly replacing the use of stimulants, tonics, and fancy drinks. The women swarm after it. The churches and moral associations give it their influence, as it is product of alcohol, gives great powers of endurance, and does not lose its effects more than food. The druggists sell it for Moxie Nerve Food. It is said its sale is unparalleled. We welcome it.

Advice to Mothers.—MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Do not delay but bear in mind that consumption often begins with a neglected cold or cough. Adamson's Botanic Balsam wins the day in curing coughs and colds. Price 35 and 75 cents. Trial bottles 10 cents.

Mrs. Caswell's School.

The term at Mrs. Caswell's school for young ladies and misses closed yesterday and the termination of another successful year was marked by a reception and the graduation of a class consisting of Miss Lena A. Newhall of Portland, Miss Mary L. Allard of Whitefield, N. H., and Miss Mary L. Fenn of Portland. A large number of guests were present at the exercises, besides the teachers and nearly all of the pupils of the school. After the guests had been presented to the graduating class in the parlors, the company assembled in the school room on the second floor, where the exercises took place.

The room had been gayly decorated for the occasion. The walls were hung with the school colors, crimson and gold, while a profusion of flowers added to the beauty of the scene. Over the platform was the date '86 in daisies, and a large lyre of the same flowers was upon the mantelpiece, while bouquets of choice flowers were placed around the room. The graduating class, dressed in white, looked as lovely as the flowers with which they were surrounded.

The exercises were enjoyable, the participants showing how well they had profited by their excellent teaching and the company testifying their appreciation by liberal applause. The programme follows:

Music—Capriccioso .....Miss Shirley

Diamond Island.

The property of the Diamond Island Association has been greatly improved this season under the management of an efficient board of directors. A new and substantial wharf has been built at Diamond Cove, accessible at all times of the tide. Six new cottages of attractive design have been built at a cost of from $800 to $2,000 each. Streets have been opened and graded. The entire grove has been abandoned for pasturage and devoted to the exclusive use and pleasure of the cottagers and visitors. The spacious restaurant building has been repainted and refurnished and will be operated upon a much improved plan this year. The association controls the entire island, owning about two-thirds of it and holding the remainder under lease. No theatres, billiard saloons, or places of general public rendezvous of like character, are allowed. No general stores are permitted to be run on the island, but arrangements have been made with the management of the steamer Isis for furnishing cottagers with whatever they desire promptly upon their order. The services of Mr. Isaac E. Thurlow, who is in the employ of the association and its agent upon the island, are always at the command of residents. Mr. Thurlow has a fine herd of 30 cows, and is required to deliver milk, ice, produce and fuel at market rates. The association have leased their three wharves, Casco wharf, Diamond Cove wharf and Farm Landing, to the Diamond Island Transportation Company, who own and run the steamer Isis. The steamer makes regular and frequent trips from Burnham's Wharf to all Diamond Island landings, and has the exclusive right of all association wharves. The steamer is a gem, new and absolutely safe, runs steadily and swiftly, and accommodates easily 75 or 80 passengers. Diamond Island is one of the most attractive, and is fast becoming one of the most popular places upon the coast for summer cottagers. Diamond Cove is now accessible to those who desire a day's outing of quiet enjoyment. For a beautiful and refreshing sail take an hour with the Isis around the island.

Tired Languid Dull

Expresses the condition of thousands of people at this season. The depressing effects of the warm weather and that tired feeling are quickley overcome by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It gives strength in place of weakness, gives tone to every organ, creates an appetite, and purifies the blood. Give it a trial now.

"Two months ago I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla as an experiment, as I had no appetite or strength, and felt tired all the time. I attributed my condition to scrofulous humor. I had tried several different kinds of medicine, without receiving any benefit. But as soon as I had taken half a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparila, my appetite was restored, and my stomach felt better. I have taken three bottles, and I never felt better." MRS. J. F. DOLBEARE, Pascoag, R. I.

Cured and Built Up

"My daughter had been ailing some time with general debility, and Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended to us. After she had taken three bottles she was completely cured and built up. It is with great pleasure that I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla." BYE M. MERRILLES, Supt. Cincinnati & Louisville Mail Line Co., Cincinnati.

"I have been troubled for many years with violent headaches. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I feel like a new being. I earnestly recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all who suffer with headaches." MRS. E. SATCHELL, Gates Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.
